

JESSICA MITTELMAN

I have been an international school teacher for twelve years in five different countries. My purpose is for students to leave my classroom having learned both divergent and critical thinking, as well as empathy and curiosity.

To Whom It May Concern,

As my above positions indicate, I am an artist and international school teacher by trade. And yet I've also had the opportunity to shape and craft a variety of other programs during my roles as Curriculum Leader, Creative Product Manager, and Efficiency Consultant. I've worked with NGO heads and resort owners, from retail to schools, in my native tongue or in tribal ones. My years in different countries have granted me these opportunities and taught me flexibility and openness.

Some of my career highlights are as follows:

- Writing brand new visual arts curriculum for three schools to fit with PBL collaborations, to have an international art history focus, and even online courses for the school years affected by COVID-19
- Creating and organizing an island-wide plastic-to-art project with both local and government schools as well as local vendors and businesses
- Leading teacher trainings and being selected to speak at national teaching conventions as well as at AASSA in Quito, Ecuador
- Designing systems and products for which to produce both school funds and income for unemployed women
- Providing high quality, culturally-aware education to students from nursery ages to adulthood in four different countries
- Getting the opportunity to learn Luganda and Italian to proficiency

I may not be your typical applicant, but if that is so, then be assured I am also an outlier in terms of my work ethic, quality communication, and problem-solving skills. I will be an asset as part of your staff and am eager to apply myself once again to in-person education!

Please email me so we can start a conversation about how I would be grateful to benefit your team.

Blessings,
Jessica Mittelman

JESSICA MITTELMAN

I have been in education for over a decade now and have been blessed enough to teach in four different countries and learned both flexibility and organization; divergent and critical thinking.
